

HEALING OF TENDON AUTOGRAFTS AND PRESERVED TENDON ALLOGRAFTS IN INDUCED TENDON SHEATHS

P. A. LEISTIKOW

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER 1.	1.1.	TENDON STRUCTURE
	1.2.	TENDON ARCHITECTURE
CHAPTER 2.	2.1.	TENDON BLOOD SUPPLY
	2.1.	TENDON METABOLISM
CHAPTER 3.		TENDON HEALING
	3.1.	History and recent developments
	3.2.	Phases of tendon healing
	3.2.1.	First phase
	3.2.2.	Second phase
	3.2.3.	Third phase
	3.3.	Tensile strength
	3.4.	Summary comment
CHAPTER 4.		TENDON AUTOGRAFTS
	4.1.	History and recent developments
	4.2.	Fate of the cells of the graft
	4.3.	Fate of the collagenous tissue
	4.4.	Influence of functional forces
	4.5.	Revascularization
	4.6.	Summary comment
CHAPTER 5.		TENDON ALLOGRAFTS
	5.1.	History and recent developments
	5.2.	Inflammatory reactions

- 5.3. Conservation methods
- 5.4. Cellular reactions
- 5.5. Fate of the cells of the graft
- 5.6. Fate of the collagenous
tissue
- 5.7. Revascularization
- 5.8. Summary comment

CHAPTER 6.

ATTEMPTS TO CONTROL ADHESION FORMATION

- 6.1. Blocking agents
- 6.2. Pharmacological agents
- 6.3. Artificial tendon substitutes
- 6.4. The pseudosheath concept

CHAPTER 7.

SCOPE OF INVESTIGATION

CHAPTER 8.

MATERIAL AND METHODS

- 8.1. Experimental animals
- 8.2. Experiments
- 8.3. Investigation methods:
 - 8.3.1. Microfil injection
technique
 - 8.3.2. Microradioangiography
 - 8.3.3. Histology
- 8.4. Conservation method
- 8.5. Techniques:
 - 8.5.1. Anaesthesia
 - 8.5.2. Operative techniques
 - 8.5.3. Injection of contrast fluids

CHAPTER 9.

RESULTS

- 9.1. Anatomy of the normal calcaneal tendon of the rabbit
- 9.2. The formation of a pseudosheath
- 9.3. Characteristics of the Cialit-stored tendon
- 9.4. Tendon autografts transplanted through a Silastic induced pseudo tendon sheath

- 9.4.1. The fate of the functional tendon autograft
- 9.4.2. The fate of the non-functional tendon autograft
- 9.4.3. Summary comment
- 9.5. Cialit-stored tendon allograft transplanted through a Silastic induced pseudo tendon sheath
 - 9.5.1. The fate of the functional tendon allograft
 - 9.5.2. The fate of the non-functional tendon allograft
 - 9.5.3. Summary comment
